Worked On New Science For 40 Years

The Author of "Characterology" traveled the world over in search of material

Mr. L. Hamilton McCormick, member of the well-known McCormick family of Chicago, has just completed his epoch-making work on "Characterology." It is in many respects the most remarkable study that has ever been offered the peoples of the world.

For the first time, Character Analysis has been removed from the sphere of uncertainty and made an exact science. Mr. McCormick's rules for reading character are so simple and so true that anyone who studies this subject seriously can become an expert reader of character.

Mr. McCormick's work is remarkable not only for what it contains but also for the manner in which it was conceived and written.

Forty years were spent in gathering material, including ten solid years devoted to the actual writing. The first edition was revised and entirely rewritten more than forty times before released to the publisher.

"Characterology" is a work of 700 pages. It is illustrated with charts and a unique collection of photographs of life and death masks of renowned and notorious individuals, with biographical and analytical readings.

It takes up every feature and tells you what each different type signifies—the contour of the head; profile indications; the different types of heads, fore-heads, eyes, eyelids and eyebrows, the different types of noses; the mouth, lips and teeth; ears, cheeks, jaws and chin; hair and neck, brain and cranium; complexion.

There is little credit in diagnosing character as to a few evident traits, for such is within the capacity of all men; but to succeed vastly beyond this and to make a large number of statements embracing the entire personality of an individual, and that without errors or omissions, is a performance requiring knowledge and experience.

"Characterology" will give you this knowledge and show you how to get this experience.

We know of no work published in recent years which has aroused more interest than "CHARACTEROLOGY." It deals with a live subject in a live way. It is written in a keen, epigrammatic style. It has a definite practical value. It is a book that should be in the home of every reader of this advertisement—and on the desk of every business executive. We shall be glad to send it to you on request.
