The Week in Boise

Will be, hereafter, regularly issued every Monday morning and distributed absolutely free.

It will be found at all hotels, restaurants, theatres, department, book and cigar stores, and otherwise placed throughout the business section of Boise, so that you may easily and conveniently obtain a copy each week for the mere trouble of taking it.

THE WEEK IN BOISE will, primarily, be a complete weekly guide to all the events of a public or quasi-public nature taking place in the city of Boise, and it will also publish other information of daily use and reference value to the residents, as well as to the strangers within our gates.

Every effort will be made to cover, fully and accurately, the entire religious, social, charitable, theatrical club, lodge, educational, sporting, political, labor and civic life of Boise, and to that end the editors will greatly appreciate any information regarding coming events along any of these lines you may have knowledge of or interest in.

Like all new enterprises, THE WEEK IN BOISE is subject to and will be improved with each succeeding issue—made more complete, more useful, more necessary.

Do not hesitate to give us your improvement ideas and betterment suggestions; they will be, indeed, welcome.

WEEK IN BOISE COMPANY.

AN EXPLANATION

This, the first issue of The Week In Boise does not pretend to be much more than a preliminary prospectus indicative of its future. In reality it falls far short of even fulfilling that mission accurately and satisfactorily, as the next few copies will most thoroughly demonstrate.

The table of contents on page 2, however, illustrates in a measure the news scope of coming issues, yet it conveys no hint of the many special feaures planned to give life tone and interest in addition to the timely advance record of each week's events.

The livest news, the most important news in the world is the news of coming events; for what's past is beyond recall, but what is to come may be taken advantage of and turned to use, profit, pleasure, knowledge and recreation, and The Week In Boise will be devoted exclusively to that vit news field. It will, indeed, live up to its slogan—"A Herald of Coming Events."

All items will be boiled down, carefully classified and so indexed that you can obtain information upon any subject quickly and without wading through an unnecessary mass of space padded description.

Many of the headings carried in the table of contents this week are inserted solely to indicate the line of news matter which will be handled under such classifications hereafter, and other new departments dealing with oncoming Boise happenings and events will be established as the need arises.

The typographical make-up of the next issue of The Week In Boise will be materially improved, especially in the method of news treatment. While no apology is necessary for the appearance of this the first issue of the weekly, it was however, practically brought into existence within the scope of a few days—and like all rush work shows the maring brand of haste. Don't try to judge it now, but be sure to get the next issue as it will be absolutely free, yet worth paying for.

We trust you will aid us by sending in notice of all future happenings and events, of every character and description you may be interested in. They will be inserted free of charge and the publicity given through the columns of The Week In Boise can not fail to be of benefit to those, who like yourself, are interested along the same channel.

We intend to reach every person in Boise with a copy of The Week In Boise each Monday, and the free circulation will be immediately extended to cover every nearby suburban point, as well as Meridian and all other towns between Boise, Nampa, Caldwell, etc.

Give us the encouragement of your support in our determination to make The Week In Boise of genuine value to the business, social interests of our City of Boise.

New Treatment of Population Centers by Census Bureau

The Census Bureau is preparing to treat all our great cities as "population centers."

Under these altered conditions boundaries imposed by municipal, county or even state organizations will be overridden. The Jersey towns across the Hudson will be accounted a part of Greater New York. Oakland and Berkeley, across the bay, will be properly recognized as a part of San Francisco. Boston will profit by the inclusion of a million people in near by suburbs. The two Kansas Cities, though in different states, will merge in one. Chicago will rightfully include Cook county and the industrial towns of Indiana as far as Gary.

In some instances the formal recognition of population centers will hasten the annexation of suburbs by teaching the entire community its essential oneness before such problems as those involving water, health, sewage, transportation, and fire and police protection. Even where actual annexation is not practicable, owing to the existence of state lines, cities may receive the stimulus which comes from official recognition of their real population. If the government figures shall be accompanied by comprehensive maps, the proper public apprehension of the real size and scope of our greater communities will be vastly promoted.—Chicago Record-Herald.

STREET NUMBERING PLAN

The street or house numbering plan used in Boise is founded upon the basis of 100 numbers to each block and the division of the city into four sections. Main street forms the dividing line between the North and South sections, and First street, the dividing line between the East and West sections. All streets running North from Main street carry the prefix N. before the number; those running South from Main street, S. before the number; those running East from First street, E. before the number and those running West from First street, W. before the number. To illustrate: 425 N. 10th street would be in the fourth block North of Main street; 235 S. 10th. street would be in the second block south of Main street; 1118 W. Idaho street would be in the 11th block west of First street, and 362 E. Idaho street would be in the third block east of First street.

IDAHO—AN EASTERNER'S SALVATION.

There was a man who lived back east
And he felt very blue.
His crops were dry, his orchards poor,
He knew not what to do.

One day as he was toiling there
Beneath the red hot sun;
He wondered if 'twould ever rain,
Yet the drouth had just begun.

A boyhood friend who had come home,
Strolled by and saw him there.
He hailed from Southern Idaho,
Where the crops were always fair.

He told him of his easy way
Of turning on the rain.
He told him of his perfect fruit,
And fields of waving grain.

And his weary heart grew lighter
As his old friend told him more,
Of the land of health and sunshine,
Where the crops are always sure.

So he moved to sunny Idaho,
And bought a little land,
And planted him an orchard
Where the sage brush used to stand.

And as the years roll slowly on
The man who once was blue,
Sees in his richly laden fields,
His boyhood dreams come true.

"I wouldn't trade my little ranch,"
His neighbors heard him say,
For all the farming land they have
In the eastern States today.

—M. H. B.

Cause of Increase in the Cost of Living

One of the most potent causes of the increase in the cost of living is the concentration in the cities of the country's population. There are too many consumers and an insufficient number of producers. Forty years ago 47.6 per cent of the American people were engaged in or directly supported by the cultivation of the soil. Since then this percentage has continuously and materially declined. It had fallen to 44.3 in 1880 and ten years later it had further sunk to 37.7. It was 35.7 at the last previous census and the census now being taken will unquestionably show another serious shrinkage.

At the same time the ranks of the industrial army have been greatly augmented by a volume of immigration unprecedented in its magnitude. Nearly seven million immigrants entered the United States during the seven years ending June 30, 1909, and by far the greater number of these went to swell the urban population. There is room for millions of settlers in the west and south, but the latter-day immigrants refuse to go there. They prefer to crowd together in the big cities and so great has been the national prosperity of recent years that they have no difficulty in finding employment at wages far in excess of what they had been able to earn at home.

Just how this extremely unsatisfactory situation can be amended is hard to say, but its amendment in some way or other is the most pressing as well as the most difficult among the problems of the times. Perhaps it may be solved by the development of the countryward movement whose importation was commented upon in these columns a day or two ago. Nothing more desirable or could be more salutary. If a return to the land occurs on a sufficiently extensive scale it will be the best thing possible for every-—Philadelphia Inquirer.

For Ten Cents in Money or Stamps

To partially cover the expense of mailing, a copy of "The Week in Boise" will be sent to your address every Monday morning for ten consecutive weeks. This means only one cent a week and will ensure you accurate advance information of all the interesting events taking place in Boise each week: To be sure, you can get it absolutely free at any of the down town distributing places, but you may forget it some Monday and wish you had it after you get home, or the demand may, on certain occasions, be greater than the supply. One cent a week will bring you a copy sure. We do not charge for "The Week in Boise;" that is free to you, but we can hardly afford to pay the mailing charges in addition to the cost of issuing it. In fact a cent a week only covers the actual postage, and we stand the addressing and wrapping charges.

Smuggles Jewels Inside of a Dog

Many people have the impression that smuggling, owing to the vigilance of the custom house officers and dock police in this and other countries, is as much a thing of the past as hoopskirts. As a matter of fact, it is carried on systematically and profitably to an almost incredible extent today.

The cases of smuggling of silks, liquors, tobacco and similar merchandise which are almost daily brought to light are interesting enough, but for cleverness they bear no comparison to those of diamond smuggling, says Tit-Bits.

The Southwest African Diamond Regic recently received information that $500,000 worth of diamonds had been smuggled out of German South Africa, involving a loss of $175,000 to the German colonial treasury. A detective employed in the affair ascertained that the owners of the jewels intrusted them to women who travelled from Luderwitz Bay to Cape Town with the diamonds secreted in their clothes. When the women were arrested at Cape Town the stones were no longer in their possession, and it was surmised that they had been shipped on board a German liner bound for Europe through the connivance of the steward. For years past diamond mugging has flourished in Southwest Africa.

The great De Beers Diamond Mining association employs a large number of private police, some to guard against the stealing of the gems by the native laborers and others to check I. D. B.—illicit diamond buying. The latter business, put down to some extent by their vigilance, is not crushed, and illicit diamond buyers still thrive. The great field for diamond smugglers is in the United States, as the duty on stones there is very high and the demand always great.

Diamonds from the mines have been found by customs officers in boot soles and boot heels, and only a little while ago a lady of Jewish extraction was discovered wearing a pair of corsets that were a small diamond mine in disguise. A leather receptacle attached to the interior of the corsets and so constructed as to fit the figure of the wearer was filled with uncut stones of a value simply enormous.

A pelican was on one occasion landed from a liner in charge of a porter. A dock policeman, in a fit of playfulness forced the bird to open its mouth, and discovered to his surprise that this member of the feathered family was an improvement on the hen that laid the golden egg. In the bird's mouth were found diamonds to the value of several hundred pounds.

A gentleman travelled to New York accompanied by a little Skye terrier. Information arrived at Manhattan Island before the ship put in at the dock that the passenger was the possessor of some very select and precious gems, and the customs officials were warned to be on the lookout for him. When he landed, however, he was found in possession of nothing dutiable, and was therefore allowed to proceed to his destination with his dog.

The next day the terrier was shot by its owner. As the customs officials somehow afterward managed to discover, it seems that just before the vessel reached New York the young gentleman, who had previously starved his dog for two days, procured some fat from the ship's cook and, cutting it into pieces about the size of a walnut, stowed a diamond in each portion. The hungry dog swallowed the fat, and in a short time the diamonds were safely stowed away in its interior. The diamond smuggler had no difficulty in evading the vigilance of the customs officials, and the day following his arrival in America shot the dog and then recovered his diamonds.

A lady who travelled frequently across the Atlantic had a Belgian dog which was always with her. This dog was provided by nature with a shaggy coat, but its owner furnished it with a second garment which had formed the natural covering of a larger animal. Under this artificial coat the canine carried into America all manner of things of value upon which duty was payable, including scores of diamonds and other stones.

The ordinary everyday smuggler is almost as ingenious as the diamond smuggler. The popularity of the motor car on the continent has made smuggling quite common. Some little time ago suspicions were aroused on the French frontier by the frequent night excursions over the Berlin side of a large motor car.

The police finally ordered the occupants to pull up, and, as the order was not obeyed, obstacles were placed in their path. This had the desired effect, and when the car was examined nearly $1000 worth of Moravian tobacco was discovered and seized. It subsequently transpired that the occupants of the vehicle had managed to smuggle several thousand pounds' worth of tobacco under the cover of darkness.

A few years ago a common wagon, loaded with stone blocks of the type that are used for building purposes, was seized by the customs officers on the French frontier. Each stone block was found to contain a zinc tank holding 300 litres of alcohol at 96 degrees of proof. Altogether 15 dummy blocks, containing 4500 litres of alcohol, were confiscated.—New York Herald.
